CHAI OF THE TIGER | JL SUKMA

-ALOO CHAAT

What is Chaat?

Chaat is Indian Streetfood.

Translated, it means a delicacy, to taste, or to lick

Chaat is typically enjoyed at roadside stalls and food carts throughout South Asia, including India, Pakistan, Nepal, and Bangladesh

The term "chaat" evokes the idea of savoring every last crumb! We hope you will do just that at Chai of the Tiger!

If you have any questions, please don't hesitate to ask us. We're here to help!

Chaat terms to help you decide:

Papdi - Spiced wheat crackers that serve as a base for toppings or delicious on their own

Pani - Means water, but when prepared as Pani Puri, it is prepared with fresh chutneys to give a special flavor

Aloo - You say potato, we say Aloo

Sev - Crispy chickpea-flour noodle snacks. They add a healthy crunch to chaat

Pav - Means bread, but served by us as toasted slices of soft buns - buttered or using - your choice!

A feast of chaat to share:

A man and a woman are standing together, smiling. The man is wearing a white long-sleeved button-down shirt, a white Balinese headpiece (udeng) with a yellow flower, and a brown batik sarong. The woman is wearing a brown lace Balinese kebaya and a brown batik sarong. They are both smiling at the camera.

My wife and I love Indian street-foods!

We came to Bali early in 2021 for a sabbatical and... decided to stay. One thing led to another. Starting Chai of the Tiger has been and still is a great adventure!

We try to make as much as we can in-house - our yogurts, papdis, samosas, sauces, and spice mixes are homemade. We also avoid plastic as much as possible and all our water is filtered through a reverse-osmosis system.

Nice cosy place in Bisma Ubud serving their take on contemporary Indian street food.. as an Indian was definitely not disappointed and ended up visiting the place on a couple of occasions during my visit to Ubud.
